Hi Ray,

Sharon is also looking at the planting schedule, cost of the plants and any soil or anchoring issues with flow.

I will try to see you today. We are working on stormwater sampling today and are working on a weather schedule.

Enjoy,
Dale

Dale,

i'll be traveling down to the Cape later this AM. probably won't get there until 2 or so.

Paul thinks that the velocity of stormwater will not be too bad for the plants. i showed him the list and he was able to ID just about all the plants, and confirmed that most or all are "wetland" plants. consequently, he was not too concerned either with the volume . . .

on a note of caution however, we should all be consciously aware that the layer of plantable biosoil will range from about 8 to 12 inches or so. underneath this biosoil will be another layer of the 20 mil polyethylene sheeting . . . this sheeting and the overlying soil constitutes the wetland "ponding" area. so, the point is that a given landscaper or volunteer, whether EPA or other, CANNOT inadvertently puncture the sheet while planting. for instance, no shovels! even hand tools need to be carefully used.

anyway, still haven't gotten a cost estimate for the work, so i can't say yet how much of it we can do. haven't forgotten your request to soften the landscape prior to moving over to Chatham.

talk to you today or tomorrow . . .

Hi Ray,

I am meeting with Sharon Rooney from the Cape Cod Commission today (May 8th) to go over the planting plan. Attached is a short version of Sharon's' resume.

Enjoy,

Dale,

just fyi, after you left on Wed, Heather McElroy from CCC stopped by the site. she seemed to be more or less up to speed on the landscaping matter, and so i mentioned some of the issues you and i had discussed . . . just in case you receive emails or inquiries in this regard.

still working on getting an estimate for the work per our discussion . . .
